Overview:

PROS:

- Low Ammo Cost (vs. other assault rifles)
- Decent Range
- High RoF
- Accurate
- Fully-Automatic
- Large Magazine
- Good Damage

CONS:

- Reloads Slowly (vs. other assault rifles)

TACTICS:

Basically a high level version of the M-TAR, it has a very economical ammo cost, a high rate of fire, and has a large effective range. Its reload speed leaves something to be desired, however, leaving the wielder a sitting duck during hordes.

Recommended gear:

- Glasses to improve it range, with some variants improving accuracy as well.
- Ammunition Pouch/Bandoliers to increase its reloading speed.

BACKGROUND:

The G36 assault rifle family is an example of new thinking in weaponry, made of high-strength polymers with metal used where appropriate. Early models used to overheat during prolonged firefights, greatly reducing accuracy and phasing it out from service in its homeland for a similar weapon. New models have a handguard and barrel of alloys for better resistance against temperature and environment.

Primary weapon of the German Federal police and armed forces. Also equipped by police and security agencies around the globe.

Variations:
